Divine Enjoyment
A Theology of Passion and Exuberance
Elaine Padilla

“Padilla’s constructive proposal of a theology of a passionate and exuberant God—the God of eros, desire, compassion, suffering, love, and self-transformation—will resonate deeply with contemporary readers of diverse religious persuasions. The book is a highly erudite and breathtakingly creative synthesis of classical theological works. It transforms and enriches our understanding of who God is in a way totally unexpected. It is no doubt one of the best books on God by the younger American theologians.”—Peter Phan, Georgetown University

“Elaine Padilla’s book offers a breath of fresh air into a theological discourse that often dwells on suffering and survival, ignoring our desire and attempts to achieve enjoyment. Her theology of enjoyment emphasizes reciprocal and communal relations between God and God’s creation. Padilla’s poetic, erotic, and aesthetic approach expands theological language about the sacred and offers an alternative metaphysics infused with passion and pleasure.”—Michelle Gonzalez Maldonado, University of Miami

Elaine Padilla is Assistant Professor of Constructive Theology at New York Theological Seminary.
